It has been a long time that scientists have wanted to know if sleep helps memory.

The latest study shows that a nap during the day does help the brain memorize more.

The scientists say the brain may need sleep to process short-term memories and then make space for new things to be learned. It is like an e-mail box. You have to clear out the e-mail box when it is full. Otherwise, you can't get any new e-mail. The study doesn't say whether a lot of sleep helps the same way or not, but it is certain that taking a nap when you are tired during the day is helpful.

Most children learn and grow by playing with dolls and toys. However, most of these toys follow common boy or girl gender roles. Now there's good news in the toy world for gender-fluid people.

Mattel, the maker of Barbie, is now selling gender-neutral dolls. Mattel's Creatable World line has six dolls with different hair and skin colors. Each of them has both short and long hair. Also, they have different clothes.

These dolls can help include gender-fluid children more in society. They can also help change parents' and children's ideas about gender roles. With Creatable World, there is now a doll for everyone.
